WEDNESDAY, JULY 26, 1899.

It is surprising to us that some of the Southern editors could use their papers in saying mean things about Fighting Joe Wheeler, a man who has shown by every act of his life that he cares more for his country than he did for wealth or his life.

Secretary of War Russell A. Alger has tendered his resignation as a member of President McKinley's Cabinet, and it has been accepted. Elihu Root, of New York, has been appointed his successor. The resignation of Secretary Alger is believed to have been sought by the President.

The United States government has not yet restored the postoffice at Lake City, S. C., and the good people of that section are being deprived of the mail facilities. This is an outrage, and deserves the condemnation of every citizen of our whole country. If a mob of five or six men were to assassinate the postmaster of Boston or some other Republican stronghold, would the government deprive the people of that city of mail facilities?

From present indications the American exhibit at the Paris exposition will astonish Europe in the matter of machinery, whatever it may do in agriculture and other industrial matters. The showing of American skill in heavy mechanical ironworking will, it is said, be the most complete that America has ever made, either at home or abroad. There will be at least 17 American locomotives on exhibition, and the examples of other structural work, such as bridges, etc., will be equally extensive. The commissioners think that the mechanical department will, in its way, be quite as great a surprise to Europe as was the Spanish war.

Elberton, Ga., is going to have a car nival. The big event takes place from August 21 to 25 inclusive. The railroads have named an exceedingly low rate for the round trip and 20,000 visitors are expected to be in attendance. The program embraces many attractive features and the affair is certain to prove a big success. Among the long list of attractions appears horse racing. bicycle contests, shooting tournaments. fire works display, balloon ascensions, military pageants, brass band tournaments, baseball and tennis games. An old-fashioned Georgia barbecue and a big horseswappers' convention are also down on the program. Distinguished orators from all sections of the country will be present.

Of all classes of people, ministers of the gospel should be more cautious in the use of ext avagant expressions than and the strong and the blind and the declaration of Rev. Henry McDonald, be arrested for preaching his doctrine on the streets of Atlanta, he would be the first to go on his bond," is not taken seriously by those who know this reverend gentleman, still it shows that the Church is constantly trying to condescend to the world and its contaminations instead of trying to maintain a standard of her own and insisting on the world's recognition of that standard. Let the ministry abandon wild, hysterical ravings and stick closely to the trath and the cause of the Master will be considerably advanced.

Many fathers and mothers do not realize fully, perhaps, the true value of home study for the children. The influence of home training is felt in every school. Take the boy or girl who has the proper training at home, and the teacher has no trouble with him in the school room. There may be exceptions but certainly it is the general rule. If he is taught obedience at home, he will be respectful to the teacher. But the man or woman who controls and disciplines the pupil who is unruly at home, has a very difficult task to perform. Home should teach the propriety of social life, the basal principles of true etiquette, self respect, respect for others, a fixed purpose to brighten life for other people, manners at the table and in the parlor. on the play ground, in the church and in the recitation room. When a child is thoroughly trained at home in the principles above stated, its education is half completed.

How detestable is the slanderer By the side of him the midnight assassin might almost be permitted to go unwhipt of justice; for this one aims the dagger only to take away human life, while that one hurls his poisonous shafts with the deliberate intent of ruining reputation and killing character. Wholly corrupt, he finds nothing good in others; blinded, he can not see in any life the beautiful flowers of virtue and innocence and loveliness, and therefore insists that these do not bloom. He is never happy except when impugning the motives of others and ascribing sinister purposes to all their efforts. Like the harpies in fabled story, his presence is nauseous, his touch polluting. Often indeed he succeeds in turning some innocent victim's cup of life, otherwise sweet, into a bitter draught; but there remains the comforting assurance that in the end his plans will go awry and his purposes fail of accomplishment. Commend us to the man of magnanimity, though he possess a thousand faults, rather than to the loathsome villifier of his kind. Pltiable, as well as detestable, is the narrow-minded and mean-spirited man who capnot recognize merit nor appresists worth even in an enemy. ciate worth even in an enemy.

In the death of Col. Robert G. Ingersoll, fraud loses one of its most able advocates, nihilism its trusted apostle. and blasphemy its inspired silver tongue. He, among all modern infidels, has sown broadcast over the field more of the tares of unbelief and doubt than can be reckoned from the human point of view. He sowed a whirlwind, and he has reaped -. Ah! we can not peer beyond this "narrow vale between the cold and barren peaks of two eternities. We strive in vain to look beyond the heights. We cry aloud, and the only answer is the echo of our wailing cry. From the voiceless lips of the unreplying dead there comes no word;" but from the depths of doubting hearts, shattered faiths and blasted hopes rises a mournful requiem for the end of the great unknowing soul. Let us hope that he may not be meted out the harvest he has sown, for if the blood and sighs of every one from whom he struck the armor of Faith is placed on I is now knowing head, he is sunken to-night beneath a raging, ever restless, turgid sea of blood with the wailing and the weeping and the remorseful sighing of every surging billow. He was a plausible reasoner, yet under analysis a sophist and a perverter, fond of mystification by specious arguments and magical phrases. He was an advocate of purity, domestic happiness, education, temperance and freedom; and the unrelenting foe of canting hypocrisy, for it was through these banes to the church's spirituality that his antagonism was directed to the whole. He was a man of master intellect and swaved his hearers like reeds in the wind. We are told that he died as he wished, suddenly; but we can but think think that his taking off was a complete disappointment to him. Had he lingered long before treading the sombrous shore of the Stygian flood, he intended giving the lie to all his fallacious doctrines a foolish world so eager drank, and proclaim the truth he now knows too well. The seed he sowed are still germinating. Who, then, can say what the fruitage will be? His doctrine, as pernicious as the loathed intemperance he so strongly denounced, to quote his own words, "Burns up men, consumes women, detests life, curses God and despises heaven. It brings shame, not honor; terror, not safety; despair, not hope;

It is generally believed in Missouri that a great part of the booty taken by Quantrell and his famous raiders from Lawrence, Kan., in 1863, now lies buried in a great mound 150 feet high in Bates county, Mo. From time to time searching parties have dug holes in the mound in search of the plundered treasure, but none have succeeded in finding anything.

TALK NO. 3.

A MISTAKE.

There is a popular opinion that glasses should never be worn so long as the eyes can possibly get along without them.

There was never a greater mistake. The very first symptoms of defective eye sight, the first indication of fatigue, should be recognized as nature's call for help. To persist in forcing the eyes to perform work too great for their endurance, is simply an abuse of the most precious sense we have. The most eminent authority says that the greater percentage of cataract and other diseases of the eye are brought about by this habit than from all other causes combined. If you have the slightest suspicion that your eyes are not perfectly correct, I want to look them over. A defect that may be easily remedied now may be difficult later, thus a little care at the proper time may save you untold misery and many years of sight.

Respectfully,

Respectfully.
A. C. STRICKLAND.

We have again outgrown our pantaloon breeches, (as a Dutchman once said,) and we must make dem some more big. Or to make it clear to you, the house in which we do business has become too small to conveniently accommodate our large and growing trade. Hence we have secured a larger and more desirable house on Granite Row. Now, we have not forgotten what a job it was four years ago to lug about nine thousand dollars of stuff up here from our little old place. though the back doors were almost touching. And how much more of a job will it be now for us to move over twenty-five thousand of Goods clear across the Public Square. We don't want to do it, and we ain't agoin' to do it. No, we are just going to make a grab-pile of it, and let our friends and enemies come in and carry it off for us. To give you an idea
